

Multiclass conservative processes, invariant measures and matrix method.

Pablo Ferrari

The coupling of several conservative processes, like the simple exclusion process or the Hammersley process induces multiclass processes. The invariant measures for those processes are connected with the stationary output of a multiclass-customer queue. I will discuss the construction of those measures and the relation with a method coming from Physics to compute the weight of stationary configurations.